Workshop Aim:
Young people as well as adults are impacted by incidents and emergencies (e.g. Covid, Challenges of Climate change, extreme weather, flooding and the ongoing Cost of Living Crisis.
We want to explore interactions of resilience at different stages of a young person's life and identify how the community and LRF can better collaborate to improve resilience to incidents at the various life stages through to adulthood.

Objectives:

1) Provide a view as to resilience and its relevance at different ages
2) What is already in place and does it meet needs?
3) Identification of key challenges and opportunities at different ages

Discussion & Activities to:

- Map out the course/interactions through a life period and identify the key messages, knowledge needs and activities at the different stages
- Identify if these are currently being met equitably across Cleveland and if not what we can about it as a collective – where are the gaps, what would make a real difference?
- What actions / recommendations do we need to build into the strategy going forward?

Outputs

1) How LRF engage with youth, developing the skills for next generation
2) What are the key messages / elements at different ages / key life stages
3) What can the LRF do to support needs
4) What is the potential to tap into the resource already on our doorstep
5) Identification from stakeholders of what the LRF and others can do to support
